HBA0102: POLITICAL, SOCIAL AND ECONOMIC TRANSFORMATIONS OF INDIA

Objectives of the Course:

This paper traces the subaltern history and the movements of the depressed and oppressed sections of a deeply stratified Indian society from the ancient past to the present. An attempt is made to give the law students a glimpse of the changing political social and economic aspects of life from the perspective of the common man. The dynamic changes are perceived through the lens of the ruled. In-depth knowledge about this transformation helps the law students to understand the innumerable problems and issues in the present Indian society with clarity.

HLC0305: LAW OF CONTRACT - I

Objectives of the Course

Contracts play a key role in carrying on commercial activities- be it trade, business, employment or even e-commerce hence study of Contract Act enables students to understand and facilitate the basic principles of commercial transactions with understanding of rights and obligations. A thorough understanding of concepts of Contract Law is foundation to a successful legal professional.

The general principles that affect these contracts, and that allow their enforcement in case of breach, are given in sections 1 – 75 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872 (commonly known as 'ICA'). Contract remedies are also provided in the Specific Relief Act 1963 (commonly known as 'SRA'). These two laws form the main course for this paper. In these topics, we will decipher all the vivid aspects of the Contract Act.

In this context, the course seeks to cover:

HLC0306: LAW OF CRIMES I (INDIAN PENAL CODE)

Objective of the Course:

The Indian Penal Code is a Substantive law containing 511 sections. It was Lord Macaulay who moved the House of Commons in 1833 to codify the whole of Criminal Law in India. The Criminal Procedure Code was passed in 1860 (Amended in 1973). These two together constitute 'Criminal Law' of India. This codification of both the substantive and adjectival (Procedural) Criminal law brought uniformity and definiteness to the Criminal jurisprudence in India. Definition of offences, containing many ingredients must be remembered with abundant caution. Even if one ingredient is slipped, it will not amount to an offence. Further, the illustrations play a dominant role and should be studied again and again to comprehend the essentials of the offences. 'Mens rea' which is the subject of great discussion in England, is much simplified by the I.P.C. The subject is heavy but is worth its weight in gold.

After undergoing the study the student will be able to understand the following:

- Analyze criminal acts, their elements, parties to offenses, and application to the criminal justice system
- Express an increased awareness of the legal principles of criminal law and its application
- Students will demonstrate an understanding of the origins of criminal behaviour, society's response to crime, and the consequences of crime to our society, utilizing multiple perspectives
- Students will articulate ethical implications of decision making in a professional capacity.

Objective of the Course

Introduction to Social Research Methods, a course designed to teach and train law students on a variety of research approaches available in sociology in order to best address a research question in the Criminal Justice area. The purpose of this paper is to familiarize the law students with the logic of social science inquiry, to develop research question, strategies of research design, and a variety of research methods.

This paper will enable the students to understand the following:

- 1. Enable to train the students to conduct original research using quantitative, qualitative and historical research methods.*
- 2. Identify to give a basic frame work about the identification of research problem.*
- 3. Equipped to conceptualize, framing of hypothesis strategies of research plan and the tools of data collection.*
- 4. Able to understand the students to learn the report writing procedures.*
- 5. Designed in such a way will encourage the students to develop and use higher order thinking skills, including analytical, synthetic and applied thinking.*

COURSE OUTLINE

MODULE 1

Introduction:

- a) Establishment of Sociology as a Science-Contributions of August Comte, Herbert Spencer, Karl Marx, Emile Durkheim and Max Weber.
- b) Three Major Theoretical perspectives of Sociology: Functionalist Perspective, Conflict Perspective and the Interactionist Perspective.

MODULE 1I

Methods of Sociology:

- a) Comparative method-Historical method-Statistical method-Case study-Survey method-Scientific method
- b) Limitations of Scientific method in Sociology- Sociology as a Science.

MODULE III

Social Research:

a) Meaning and definition of research and social research - Types of Research: Pure-Applied- Significance of social research- objectivity-subjectivity-deduction and induction method

MODULE IV

Research Problem and Hypothesis:

- a) Identification or selection of research problem - formulation of research problem - precautions to be taken while selecting a research problem- Steps in the research process
- b) Hypothesis: Definition and characteristics-types of hypothesis-sources of hypothesis-problems in formulation of hypothesis.

MODULE V

Research Design and Sampling Technique:

- a) Research Design: Definition- Types of research design-components of good research design.
- b) Sample: Definition- characteristics of good sample - advantages of sampling- types of sample – probability and non probability sampling.

MODULE VI

Sources of Data, and Tools of Data Collection:

- a) Sources of data: primary- secondary- tertiary -Tools of data collection: interview-questionnaire-schedule-observation.
- b) Interview: Meaning-advantages-steps involved in interview-qualities of an interviewer-advantage and limitation of interview
- c) Questionnaire: Types of questionnaire-form of a questionnaire-pretesting – factors affecting the responses - reliability and validity - advantage and limitation of questionnaire
- d) Schedule: Essentials of good schedule-procedure for framing a schedule-general form and layout-content-types of question-language-sequence of questions-pilot study - advantages and limitations of schedule – difference between schedule and questionnaire.
- e) Observations: Kinds: participant-non participant-controlled and non-controlled observations- importance – limitations.

MODULE VII

Report Writing:

- a) Meaning- types of report- requisite of good report- components of research report.

HLC0509: JURISPRUDENCE

Objectives of the Course:

Laws are rules, claims are supported by arguments, and decisions are conclusions. The rules, arguments and conclusions are bound to conform to the requirement of logic. They must be systematically coordinated and carried to their consequences. Thus the whole body of legal doctrines can be considered as often considered as a more or less closely woven tissue of prepositions and deductions. The ideas which constitute this tissue are not presented to society ready-made; they are gradually unfolded by processes of collective thought; sometimes particular points get generalized and subjected to principles; at other times inferences are drawn from general prepositions. These processes constitute the dialects of law. Those dialects become ever standing principles and thus the consolidation of all wisdom of law becomes Jurisprudence.

HLC0615: LAW OF EVIDENCE

Objectives of the Course:

The Law of Evidence is one of the most important parts of the procedural law. The Law of Evidence plays a very important role in the effective functioning of the judicial system. The Law of Evidence is an indispensable part of both substantive and procedural laws. It imparts credibility to the adjudicatory process by indicating the degree of veracity to be attributed to 'facts' before the forum. This paper enables the student to appreciate the concepts and principles underlying the law of evidence and identify the recognized forms of evidence and its sources. The subject seeks to impart to the student the skills of examination and appreciation of oral and documentary evidence in order to find out the truth. The art of examination and cross-examination, and the shifting nature of burden of proof are crucial topics. The concepts brought in by amendments to the Law of Evidence are significant parts of study in this course.

After undergoing the study the student will be able to understand the following:

- To design, implement and review a plan for establishing each legal element of a given case to the required standard of proof with admissible evidence
- To plan and execute a witness examination that comports with evidentiary standards and that persuasively establishes a fact in issue in the case; anticipate and respond to evidentiary objections that may be raised during your examination
- To identify, articulate and assert appropriate evidentiary objections while listening to a witness examination, and respond appropriately to questions from the judge
- To draft and execute a witness examination for the introduction of a document or item of proof

HLA0601: INTERPRETATION OF STATUTES

Objectives of the Course

Interpretation as a branch of legal science emerges out of the necessity triggered by the element of fallibility of human communications. It is part of laws of nature. The increase in the creation of human legislations further validates the role of interpretation as a consistent source of legislation. The primary aim of all interpretation is to provide clarity to the existing legislations. Judiciary as the custodian of statutes interprets the legislation. Thus, the students of law on a need based approach will be trained to learn the implications of the schools of textualism and purposivism in the context of statutory construction as a tool of social change.

HLC0717: LABOUR LAW-I

INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS AND WAGE LAWS

Objectives of the course

Labour rights are being integral to the social and economic development since the industrial revolution. Well balanced industrial development leads to increased productivity which in turn is a factor of national progress. Gone are the days when despotic industry-owners treated our precious labour as a mere factor of production, no more than a cost to minimise in the profit and loss account. As we grow to honour the crucial contribution of labour in society, studying, analysing and understanding system of labour laws, and exploring, with a keen and uncompromising eye, its flaws, failures, gaps and loopholes, is the key to combating rampant inequality and ensuring that labour has the right to live with dignity. The labour laws introduced for this course defines socio-legal control of labour relations and the history, the present norms, the emerging areas and possible future techniques of labour jurisprudence with reference to the tripartite responsibility of State, Workers and Employers.

This course has been designed to:

- I. Educate the student on the historical evolution of modern labour jurisprudence;

(d): INDUSTRIAL AND COMMERCIAL LAW

HS20704: INTERNATIONAL LABOUR ORGANISATION AND LABOUR JURISPRUDENCE

Objectives of the course:

Industrial legislation is the child of industrial jurisprudence, which in itself, is a product of the industrial revolution in the 18th, 19th and 20th Centuries, it was a form of protest against the inhuman labour conditions that the industrial revolution ushered in. In India, pre-independence era industrial jurisprudence was rudimentary. Protection of labour has always been the primary goal of industrial laws (both those enacted by the legislature and those developed through judicial interpretation). However, well before Indian labour jurisprudence became robust, the International Labour Organisation, a multinational labour body, led the way.

This course has been designed to:

1. Introduce students to the ILO, its formation, charter documents, composition, membership and functioning;
2. Examine the international labour code and the role of India vis-à-vis the international labour code;
3. Study in detail the historical development of labour jurisprudence;
4. Elucidate the long and mutually beneficial relationship between ILO and India;
5. Instruct students various concepts of labour jurisprudence, including tripartism, and understand the role of the judiciary in this regard.

The syllabus has been prepared with these objectives and consists of 6 modules.

FOURTH YEAR

VIII-SEMESTER

HLC0819: LABOUR LAW II

SOCIAL SECURITY AND LABOUR WELFARE LAWS

Objectives of the Course:

In the previous semester, students learnt the historical background and importance of labour rights and the basics of key labour legislations governing trade unions, industrial relations, standing orders and industrial disputes. While protection of labour rights in a dispute and permitting their unionisation is one side of the coin, taking proactive measures to promote the welfare and social security of labour is the other. As the Supreme Court of India has held, time and again, the right to life guaranteed under Article 21 is not merely animal existence, but the right to live with dignity. Therefore, taking steps to ensure that the labour force of our nation lives a life of security and dignity is of unspeakable importance and is part of the constitutional obligation of the State. The aim of social security legislation is to ensure freedom from want for our workers. This paper has been designed to help students understand the social security legislations in India in light of the above context.

This course has been designed to:

- I. Instruct the student on the concept of social security, its evolution, components, and objectives;
- II. Examine the role played by ILO in developing social security jurisprudence;
- III. Provide students with a critical and practical understanding of the rights of the employee in case of employment-related death, disablement, disease or accidents;

(b): CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND PROPERTY LAW

HS40802: LAND LAWS OF TAMIL NADU

Objectives of the Course:

Land rights are an integral part of Land Laws, as they socially enforce groups of individuals' rights to own land in concurrence with the land laws of a nation. Land Law addresses the legal mandates set forth by a country in regards to land ownership, while land rights refer to the social acceptance of land ownership. The knowledge about the land laws of Tamil Nadu helps to understand the local laws of the State. This subject is very much helpful for civil side practice.

(d): INDUSTRIAL AND COMMERCIAL LAW

HS40804: SERVICE LAW

Objectives of the Course

“Government service is not a contract. It is a status”. Laws related to Public service in India are governed by the Constitution. One of the basic features of Indian Constitution is the separation of powers, i.e., the presence of three distinct pillars of state – Legislature, Executive and Judiciary. The Constitution conceived and provided for Civil Services like the All India Services and Central Civil Services which form an integral part of the Executive’s machinery at the central and state level. Labour laws governing civil services are quite distinct from general labour laws. The service conditions of the government servants are regulated by the Constitution of India.

This course has been designed to:

1. Trace the historical evolution of laws to govern civil services, both in ancient kingdoms and in the modern world;
2. Analyse the concept of public service laws as they are enshrined in the Indian constitution;
3. Introduce the student to fundamental concepts in public service laws; and

HS60904: SOCIAL SECURITY AND UNORGANISED LABOUR

Objectives of the Course

The bulk of India's labor force today is the unorganised sector. Suffering from poverty, without access to education, underpaid, unaware of their rights, and unable to enforce them, the odds are stacked against our unorganized sector. To address this problem, the legislature and the judiciary have, through laws and through judicial activism, repeatedly come to the rescue of these workers. This course is designed to introduce students to the challenges faced by this sector. The main objective is to instruct sector wise relevance which ensures the governance effectively. Other sectors can have identical/similar regulatory system and also be understood in the context of the treatment of the subject matter in this paper. The course work is within the viable framework.

This course has been designed to:

- I. Provide a broad-based understanding of the concept of the informal sector/unorganised labour – their nature, categories, industries, and the challenges and injustices they face;
- II. Instruct the student on the role of the ILO;
- III. Delve into the concept of social security for unorganised labour;
- IV. Focus on critical, India-specific sectors of unorganised workers and examine their individual challenges; and
- V. Survey the various legislations that target the upliftment of, and provision of benefits to, such workers.

HLC0306: LAW OF CRIMES I

INDIAN PENAL CODE

Objective of the Course:

The Indian Penal Code is a Substantive law containing 511 sections. It was Lord Macaulay who moved the House of Commons in 1833 to codify the whole of Criminal Law in India. The Criminal Procedure Code was passed in 1860 (Amended in 1973). These two together constitute 'Criminal Law' of India. This codification of both the substantive and adjectival (Procedural) Criminal law brought uniformity and definiteness to the Criminal jurisprudence in India. Definition of offences, containing many ingredients must be remembered with abundant caution. Even if one ingredient is slipped, it will not amount to an offence. Further, the illustrations play a dominant role and should be studied again and again to comprehend the essentials of the offences. 'Mens rea' which is the subject of great discussion in England, is much simplified by the I.P.C. The subject is heavy but is worth its weight in gold.

After undergoing the study the student will be able to understand the following:

- Analyze criminal acts, their elements, parties to offenses, and application to the criminal justice system
- Express an increased awareness of the legal principles of criminal law and its application
- Students will demonstrate an understanding of the origins of criminal behaviour, society's response to crime, and the consequences of crime to our society, utilizing multiple perspectives
- Students will articulate ethical implications of decision making in a professional capacity.

HLC0509: JURISPRUDENCE

Objectives of the Course:

Laws are rules, claims are supported by arguments, and decisions are conclusions. The rules, arguments and conclusions are bound to conform to the requirement of logic. They must be systematically coordinated and carried to their consequences. Thus the whole body of legal doctrines can be considered as often considered as a more or less closely woven tissue of prepositions and deductions. The ideas which constitute this tissue are not presented to society ready-made; they are gradually unfolded by processes of collective thought; sometimes particular points get generalized and subjected to principles; at other times inferences are drawn from general prepositions. These processes constitute the dialects of law. Those dialects become ever standing principles and thus the consolidation of all wisdom of law becomes Jurisprudence.

HLC0615: LAW OF EVIDENCE

Objectives of the Course:

The Law of Evidence is one of the most important parts of the procedural law. The Law of Evidence plays a very important role in the effective functioning of the judicial system. The Law of Evidence is an indispensable part of both substantive and procedural laws. It imparts credibility to the adjudicatory process by indicating the degree of veracity to be attributed to 'facts' before the forum. This paper enables the student to appreciate the concepts and principles underlying the law of evidence and identify the recognized forms of evidence and its sources. The subject seeks to impart to the student the skills of examination and appreciation of oral and documentary evidence in order to find out the truth. The art of examination and cross-examination, and the shifting nature of burden of proof are crucial topics. The concepts brought in by amendments to the Law of Evidence are significant parts of study in this course.

After undergoing the study the student will be able to understand the following:

- To design, implement and review a plan for establishing each legal element of a given case to the required standard of proof with admissible evidence
- To plan and execute a witness examination that comports with evidentiary standards and that persuasively establishes a fact in issue in the case; anticipate and respond to evidentiary objections that may be raised during your examination
- To identify, articulate and assert appropriate evidentiary objections while listening to a witness examination, and respond appropriately to questions from the judge
- To draft and execute a witness examination for the introduction of a document or item of proof

HLA0601: INTERPRETATION OF STATUTES

Objectives of the Course

Interpretation as a branch of legal science emerges out of the necessity triggered by the element of fallibility of human communications. It is part of laws of nature. The increase in the creation of human legislations further validates the role of interpretation as a consistent source of legislation. The primary aim of all interpretation is to provide clarity to the existing legislations. Judiciary as the custodian of statutes interprets the legislation. Thus, the students of law on a need based approach will be trained to learn the implications of the schools of textualism and purposivism in the context of statutory construction as a tool of social change.

HLC0717: LABOUR LAW-I

INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS AND WAGE LAWS

Objectives of the course

Labour rights are being integral to the social and economic development since the industrial revolution. Well balanced industrial development leads to increased productivity which in turn is a factor of national progress. Gone are the days when despotic industry-owners treated our precious labour as a mere factor of production, no more than a cost to minimise in the profit and loss account. As we grow to honour the crucial contribution of labour in society, studying, analysing and understanding system of labour laws, and exploring, with a keen and uncompromising eye, its flaws, failures, gaps and loopholes, is the key to combating rampant inequality and ensuring that labour has the right to live with dignity. The labour laws introduced for this course defines socio-legal control of labour relations and the history, the present norms, the emerging areas and possible future techniques of labour jurisprudence with reference to the tripartite responsibility of State, Workers and Employers.

This course has been designed to:

- I. Educate the student on the historical evolution of modern labour jurisprudence;
- II. Explain the importance of the International Labour Organisation and its role in the development of labour law;
- III. Elucidate the importance of, and laws governing, trade unions;

(d): INDUSTRIAL AND COMMERCIAL LAW

HS20704: INTERNATIONAL LABOUR ORGANISATION AND LABOUR JURISPRUDENCE

Objectives of the course:

Industrial legislation is the child of industrial jurisprudence, which in itself, is a product of the industrial revolution in the 18th, 19th and 20th Centuries, it was a form of protest against the inhuman labour conditions that the industrial revolution ushered in. In India, pre-independence era industrial jurisprudence was rudimentary. Protection of labour has always been the primary goal of industrial laws (both those enacted by the legislature and those developed through judicial interpretation). However, well before Indian labour jurisprudence because robust, the International labour Organisation, a multinational labour body, led the way.

This course has been designed to:

1. Introduce students to the ILO, its formation, charter documents, composition, membership and functioning;
2. Examine the international labour code and the role of India vis-à-vis the international labour code;
3. Study in detail the historical development of labour jurisprudence;
4. Elucidate the long and mutually beneficial relationship between ILO and India;
5. Instruct students various concepts of labour jurisprudence, including tripartism, and understand the role of the judiciary in this regard.

FOURTH YEAR

VIII-SEMESTER

HLC0819: LABOUR LAW II

SOCIAL SECURITY AND LABOUR WELFARE LAWS

Objectives of the Course:

In the previous semester, students learnt the historical background and importance of labour rights and the basics of key labour legislations governing trade unions, industrial relations, standing orders and industrial disputes. While protection of labour rights in a dispute and permitting their unionisation is one side of the coin, taking proactive measures to promote the welfare and social security of labour is the other. As the Supreme Court of India has held, time and again, the right to life guaranteed under Article 21 is not merely animal existence, but the right to live with dignity. Therefore, taking steps to ensure that the labour force of our nation lives a life of security and dignity is of unspeakable importance and is part of the constitutional obligation of the State. The aim of social security legislation is to ensure freedom from want for our workers. This paper has been designed to help students understand the social security legislations in India in light of the above context.

(c): CRIMINAL LAW AND FORENSIC SCIENCE

HS40803: FORENSIC SCIENCE AND INVESTIGATION

Objectives of the Course:

Forensic science is a versatile and enormously powerful tool in the investigation of a crime. Forensic investigation is vital to the mission of truth seeking, because the forensic evidence does not lie. Forensic investigation provide an overview of the field of forensic investigation whilst highlighting the interrelated principles and procedures of criminal investigation Moreover gathering and examining forensic evidence is the only way to ensure that false information is exposed, and ultimately kept from the gates of justice. The forensic evidence, the forensic investigator, and the forensic examinations are all linked in the service of these objectives. Forensic Science deals with the application of the knowledge and methodology of various disciplines of science to legal matters. It involves the use of multiple disciplines such as physics, chemistry, biology, computer science and engineering for evidence analysis. The role of forensic science in criminal justice and the legal system is highly commendable.

After undergoing the study the student will be able to understand the following:

- To emphasize the methods of securing, searching and documenting crime scenes.
- To emphasize the students the legal importance of chain of custody.

(d): INDUSTRIAL AND COMMERCIAL LAW

HS40804: SERVICE LAW

Objectives of the Course

“Government service is not a contract. It is a status”. Laws related to Public service in India are governed by the Constitution. One of the basic features of Indian Constitution is the separation of powers, i.e., the presence of three distinct pillars of state – Legislature, Executive and Judiciary. The Constitution conceived and provided for Civil Services like the All India Services and Central Civil Services which form an integral part of the Executive’s machinery at the central and state level. Labour laws governing civil services are quite distinct from general labour laws. The service conditions of the government servants are regulated by the Constitution of India.

This course has been designed to:

1. Trace the historical evolution of laws to govern civil services, both in ancient kingdoms and in the modern world;
2. Analyse the concept of public service laws as they are enshrined in the Indian constitution;
3. Introduce the student to fundamental concepts in public service laws; and
4. Examine the laws governing civil services and the impact of factors as diverse as judicial review and globalisation.

HS60904: SOCIAL SECURITY AND UNORGANISED LABOUR

Objectives of the Course

The bulk of India's labor force today is the unorganised sector. Suffering from poverty, without access to education, underpaid, unaware of their rights, and unable to enforce them, the odds are stacked against our unorganized sector. To address this problem, the legislature and the judiciary have, through laws and through judicial activism, repeatedly come to the rescue of these workers. This course is designed to introduce students to the challenges faced by this sector. The main objective is to instruct sector wise relevance which ensures the governance effectively. Other sectors can have identical/similar regulatory system and also be understood in the context of the treatment of the subject matter in this paper. The course work is within the viable framework.

HLA1006: COMPARATIVE LAW

Objectives of the Course

The evolution of national societies and their legal systems has progressively developed the insights on the science of universal legal philosophy and system based approaches. Comparative law as a field of knowledge is not a separate discipline in law. It has a substantive value in the sense of strengthening the role of rule of law and justice in human life by way of working on the uniformity, development and harmonisation of laws. The current universal legal system is based on the recognition of normative principles, effectively promoted by branches of public law systems such as international law and constitutional law. Moreover, the evolving nature of comparative legal thought process has lead to the formation of varied sub-systems of law and approaches. Therefore, learning comparative law and its extended horizons of knowledge signals a need and value based approach for the students of law.

2. Significantly enhance language skills, both spoken and written.
3. Understand the importance of honing advocacy skills.

HBC0102: BUSINESS STATISTICS AND COMPUTER APPLICATIONS

Objectives of the Course:

This course provides a gentle introduction to statistical reasoning for a non-technical, legal audience. Its primary goal is to provide law students with the literacy necessary to be well-informed and critical consumers of statistical expertise in legal contexts. No mathematical background beyond high school is assumed, and when possible, graphical and concrete examples will be used instead of formulas..

COURSE OUTLINE

Module 1: Introduction to Business Statistics

- a) Introduction- meaning, definition, functions, objectives and importance of statistics
- b) Scope of Statistics in Economics, Management, Science and Industry
- c) Collection of data – primary & secondary – Methods collecting primary data, classification & tabulation – Graphs and Types of Graphs .

Module 2: Sampling

- a) Sample & Sampling - Need and Methods of Sampling - Types of sampling
- b) Sampling and Non Sampling Errors
- c) Sampling Techniques - Sampling distribution

Module 3: Central Tendencies and Dispersion

- a) Measures of central tendencies and Measures of dispersion (Review only)
- b) Criteria for good measures of central tendency
- c) Arithmetic Mean, Median, Mode for grouped and ungrouped data, combined mean - their relevance and application in business.

Module 4: Correlation and Regression

- a) Correlation-meaning and definition-Karl Pearson's co-efficient of correlation, Spearman's rank correlation - Concurrent deviation- Probable error
- b) Regression analysis- Regression lines- Regression equation under Algebraic method and their application in business-Types of Test.

Module 5: Probability

- a) Probability Concepts- Approaches to assigning Probability
- b) Theorems of Probability- Addition Theorem- Multiplication Theorem
- c) Conditional Probability- Random Variable and Expected value.

Module 6: Introduction to SPSS

- a) Introduction to SPSS - Tour of SPSS windows, menus, and dialogue boxes
- b) Open, save, and close SPSS data and output files - Preparing a data entry codebook
- c) Creating a SPSS data file - Enter data into an SPSS data file – Checking and Correction of data file for errors

Module 7: Operating Basics of SPSS

- a) Obtaining descriptive statistics - Create a variety of graphs (histograms, bar graphs)
- b) Choosing appropriate statistical techniques to address specific research questions
- c) Perform a variety of statistical procedures and interpret the output.

5. Nabendu Pal and Haded Sarkar S.A . Statistics - Concept and Application, PHI, New Delhi.
6. Agarwal.B.M. Business Mathematics and Statistics, Ane Books Pvt.Ltd., New Delhi.

Learning Outcomes:

1. Produce appropriate graphical and numerical descriptive statistics for different types of data.
2. Apply probability rules and concepts relating to discrete and continuous random variables to answer questions within a business context.
3. Conduct and interpret a variety of hypothesis tests to aid decision making in a business context.
4. Use simple/multiple regression models to analyse the underlying relationships between the variables through hypothesis testing.
5. Use a statistical package frequently used by practitioners to analyse the data using techniques from SPSS.

HBC0103: PRINCIPLES OF ECONOMICS

Objectives of the Course

The basic objective of this course is to make the students to understand the various advance economic principles as well as their applications. In addition to that this course also enables the students to understand sectors specific and their impact in shaping trends in economic indicators in pursuit of Indian Constitution.

- d) The Methodology of Economics - Deductive Method and Inductive Method
- e) A Positive and a Normative Economics.

Module II Demand and Supply Analysis

- a) Meaning – Definition- Types- Functions of Demand
- b) Factors Affecting Demand- Law of Demand
- c) Exceptions to the Law of Demand
- d) Elasticity of Demand – Types and Measurement of Elasticity of Demand
- e) Factors influencing Elasticity of Demand
- f) Meaning and Definition of Supply – Law of Supply- Factors determining Supply.
- g) Consumer's Surplus- Producers Surplus.

Module III Theory of Consumer Behaviour

- a) Meaning – Definition - Concept of Utility
- b) Cardinal - Ordinal Utility Approach
- c) Law of Diminishing Marginal Utility - Law of Equi-Marginal utility
- d) Meaning of Indifference Curve- Approach to Indifference Curve Technique
- e) Properties and Uses of Indifference Curve
- f) Budget Line and Consumer's Equilibrium.

Module IV Theory of Production

- a) Meaning - Factors of Production
- b) Theories of Production: Law of Variable Proportions – Law of Returns to Scale
- c) Equal Product Curves – MRTS
- d) Producer's Equilibrium
- e) Internal and External Economies and Diseconomies of Scale of Production.

Module V Cost and Revenue Analysis

- a) Meaning – Functions -Concepts of Cost
- b) Fixed Cost -Variable Cost -Total Cost Average Cost
- c) Marginal Cost - Average Cost Curves -Derivation of SAC and LAC
- d) Revenue Concepts - Total Revenue - Average Revenue and Marginal Revenue Curves
- e) Relationship between Average Revenue and Marginal Revenue

Module VI Price and Output Determination Under Different Market Structure

- a) Nature of Market -Structure – Characteristics of Market
- b) Price and Output Determination - Perfect Competition, Monopoly, Duopoly
- c) Oligopoly -Monopolistic Competition
- d) Price Discrimination
- e) Price Policy and Pricing Methods.

Module VII Principles – Money and Finance

- a) Nature and Definition of Money-Concepts of Money
- b) Function of Money - Demand for Money
- c) Classical Approach: The Keynesian Approach
- d) Public Finance- Source of Public Finance
- e) Tax and Non-Tax Revenue- Characteristic of Good Tax System
- f) Theories of Public Expenditure – Peacock -Wisemen Theory
- g) Public Debt- Classification of Public Debt

- Develop an inter-disciplinary approach and enhance the employability of students.

HBC0104: COMPUTER FUNDAMENTALS AND LEGAL IMPLICATIONS IN OPERATING SYSTEMS

Objectives of the Course

This course introduces the details about the:

- 1. Concepts of Computer fundamentals, MS-Office and Operating Systems.*
- 2. To bridge the fundamental concepts of computers along with the current knowledge of the students.*
- 3. The student learns the fundamental components used in a Digital computer which is essential for the programme.*

COURSE OUTLINE

Module 1: Introduction of Computers and Number Systems

- a) Fundamentals of Computers - Characteristics of Computers - Computer Language
- b) Generation of Computers – Introduction to Information Technology.
- c) Number Systems - Conversion from one number system to another.

Module II: Logic Gates and Flip Flops

- a) Complements - Binary Codes - Binary Logic - Logic Gates
- b) Truth Tables - Boolean Algebra -Axioms- Sequential Logic
- c) Flip Flop -RS, JK, D and T Flip Flops

Module III : K Map And Combinational Circuits

- a) Truth Table Simplification of Boolean Function – K-Map Method (Upto 5 Variables)
- b) Mc-Clausky Tabulation Method - Adders- Subtractors
- c) Decoder – Encoder - Multiplexer- Demultiplexer.

Module IV: Ms Office and Ms Powerpoint

- a) MS-Office - Introduction to MS Word-Menus- Shortcuts
- b) Create - Open – Saving - Editing Text Documents - Cut, Copy, Paste
- c) Creating Tables –Merging – Splitting - Mail Merge - Spell Check – Macros –Templates - Using Wizards.
- d) MS-Power Point- Creating - Formatting a Presentation - Adding Graphics to a Presentation.

Module 5: Ms Excel

- a) MS-Excel - Introduction-Working Spread Sheets
- b) Formatting Spread Sheets - Creating Charts
- c) Formula Usage.

Module VI: OS security problems and Microsoft warrant case

- a) The Security Problem - Program Threats - Cryptography as a Security Tool
- b) User Authentication – Firewalling to Protect Systems
- c) Microsoft warrant case – CLOUD ACT

Module-VII: The Laws Relating to Computers and the Internet

- a) Multimedia works - Copyright violation on the internet – Idea/Expression dichotomy in computer related works
- b) Software Piracy – Trademark issues in relation to computers and internet
- c) Domain name registration – Legal protection for database

HBC0207: PROGRAMMING IN C AND DATA STRUCTURES

Objectives of the Course

This course introduces the basic programming concepts and fundamentals of Programming Language C and Data Structures. It is oriented to those who want to advance structured and procedural programming understanding and to improve C programming skills. The major objective is to provide students with understanding of code organization and functional hierarchical decomposition with using complex data types. Data structure is a specific method of storing and organizing system data in order to use it efficiently. Large amounts of data including internet indexing services and large databases can be efficiently managed with the implementation of data structures. It also has a major role to play in designing efficient algorithms and system software programs.

COURSE OUTLINE

Module I: Introduction to C Language

- a.) Introduction - Benefits of C - Character set - Identifier and Keywords
- b.) Data Types Variables- Declarations – Constants- Operators
- c.) Library Functions- Data Input Output Functions -Simple C Programs.

Module II: Branching and Looping

- a.) Decision making statements - If, If-Else, Switch
- b.) Looping statements - While, Do-While, For Loop - Nested Control Structures
- c.) Jumping statements - Break and Continue, Go To Statements.

Module III: Functions, Arrays and Strings

- a.) Function - Definition - Passing Arguments - Call by Value, Call by Reference
- b.) Recursions - Scope and lifetime of variables in functions - Storage Classes.
- c.) Arrays - Single Dimensional Arrays - Multi-Dimensional Arrays – String Manipulations

Module IV: Structures, Union , Pointers and Files.

- a.) Structures – Definition - Declaration - Structure within structure - Self-Referential Structures
- b.) Unions – Pointers - Declarations -Passing Pointers to Functions- Operation in Pointers - Arrays of Pointers
- c.) Files and its operations.

Module V: Introduction to Data Structures

- a) Data Structure - Definition - Primitive and Non Primitive Data type
- b) Abstract Data Types – Stacks – Queues - Linked List.

Module VI: Trees and Graphs

- a.) Tree - Binary Tree - Tree Traversals - Preorder, Inorder, Postorder.
- b.) Graph – Definition - Types of Graphs – Graph Traversal –BFS and DFS.

Module VII: Sorting and Searching Algorithms

- a.) Algorithm – Properties – Analysis of Algorithms
- b.) Asymptotic Notations - Time Complexity and Space Complexity
- c.) Sorting - Bubble Sort – Selection Sort - Insertion Sort - Merge Sort
- d.) Searching - Linear Search and Binary Search.

Course Outcomes:

After completion of the course students will be able to -

- Understand the basic principles of Programming in C language.
- Ability to write a ‘C’programs for using different Data Structures and Algorithms.
- Design and develop modular programming skills.
- Demonstrate an understanding of basic data structures (such as an array-based list, linkedlist, stack, queue, binary search tree) and algorithms.

PRACTICAL EXERCISES- C and Data Structures

I. Recursion

1. nPr,nCr
2. GCD of two numbers
3. Fibonacci sequence
4. Maximum & Minimum
5. Towers of Hanoi.

II Summation of Series

1. Sin(x)
2. Cos(x)
3. Exp(x) (Comparison with built in functions)

III String Manipulation

1. Counting the no. of vowels, consonants, words, white spaces in a line of text and array of lines
2. Reverse a string & check for palindrome.
3. Substring detection, count and removal
4. Finding and replacing substrings

IV Matrix Manipulation

1. Addition & Subtraction
2. Multiplication
3. Transpose, and trace of a matrix
4. Determinant of a Matrix

V Sorting and Searching

HBC0309: RELATIONAL DATABASE MANAGEMENT SYSTEMS AND LEGAL ANALYTICS

Objectives of the Course

The amount of data available is increasing day by day. Creation and maintenance of database is an important for the analysis of data to incur the results from the data. This course presents an introduction to database management systems, with an emphasis on how to organize, maintain and retrieve information from a DBMS and to explain how it can be used in Legal Documents Analysis.

After undergoing the study of this paper, the student should be able to -

- 1) Understand the architecture Database Systems, the relational data model and the relational algebra.*
- 2) Identify the techniques for database design, Normalization and database recovery and protection.*
- 3) Understand the concept of query processing and optimization, database transactions and security.*
- 4) Understand the legal analytic tools used for analyzing the legal documents.*
- 5) Predict the outcomes using the computational model of legal arguments.*

COURSE OUTLINE

Module I: Introduction to Database Systems

- a) Purpose of Database System - Views of Data
- b) Data Models - Database Languages
- c) Database System Architecture - Database Users and Administrator
- d) Entity-Relationship Model - E-R Diagrams

Module II: Relational Model

- a) Introduction to Relational Databases-The Relational Model - Types
- b) Keys
- c) Relational Algebra - Domain Relational Calculus - Tuple Relational Calculus
- d) Fundamental Relational Algebra Operations

Module III: Structured Query Language

- a) SQL fundamentals - SQL Data Definition - Basic Structure of SQL Queries
- b) Set Operations- NULL values-Aggregate Functions
- c) Modification of the Database- Joins
- d) Views- Transactions- Integrity Constraints
- e) Triggers - Need for Triggers- Triggers in SQL

Module IV: Database Design

- a) Functional Dependencies - Non-Loss Decomposition
- b) Normalization- First, Second and Third Normal Forms
- c) Dependency Preservation - Boyce/Codd Normal Form
- d) Multivalued Dependencies and Fourth Normal Form
- e) Join Dependencies and Fifth Normal Form.

Module V- Transactions and Storage Management

- a) Transaction- A Simple Transaction Model- Storage Structure
- b) Schedules and Serializability
- c) Concurrency control- Lock based protocols- Time Stamp Based Protocols
- d) Database recovery concepts and techniques
- e) Indexing and Hashing .

Module VI- Introduction to Legal Analytics

- a) Legal Analytics Tools- Introduction to Artificial Intelligence,Big Data and Machine Learning
- b) Case based Legal Reasoning - The Legal Process-Role of Legal Concepts- Computational Models of legal concepts and cases
- c) Models for Predicting Legal Outcomes- Nearest Neighbour Approach
- d) Predicting Supreme Court Outcomes- Predicting Case Based Outcomes.

Module VII- Computational Model of Legal Arguments

- a) Introduction-The Carneades Argument Model
- b) Computational Model of Abstract Augmentation- CMLA to Compute Winners and Losers
- c) Value Judgement based Argumentative Prediction Model-
- d) Computational Model for Evidentiary Legal Argument.

Learning Outcomes:

After undergoing the course, the students will be able to

- Demonstrate elementary and advanced features of DBMS and RDBMS.
- Develop a clear understanding of the conceptual frameworks and attain a good practical understanding of the SQL.
- Build, populate, and document a secure, normalized database that meets business requirements using industry standards and best practices.
- Analyze the legal documents and predict the outcomes from the legal arguments.

LAB EXERCISES

Creation of a Database and performing the operations given below - Menu Driven Program.

a) Insertion b) Deletion c) Modification d) Generating a Simple report for the following:

- 1) Payroll
- 2) Mark sheet processing
- 3) Saving bank account for banking
- 4) Inventory system
- 5) Invoice system
- 6) Library information system

Learning Outcome:

After the completion of the course the students will be able to -

1. The study of Constitutional Law as a Transformative Document enhances ability to apply law in addressing social problems.
2. The study of Mother Document upholds democratic spirit and constitutional values promoting good governance and cultivating constitutional morality
3. It develops ability to design new social legislations and suggesting amendments to the existing legislations.
4. The study enables the students as to how the Constitution tries to bring democracy out of Public and extend it to private sphere and also ensures clear understanding of professional and ethical responsibility

HLC0305: LAW OF CONTRACT - I

Objectives of the Course

Contracts play a key role in carrying on commercial activities- be it trade, business, employment or even e-commerce hence study of Contract Act enables students to understand and facilitate the basic principles of commercial transactions with understanding of rights and obligations. A thorough understanding of concepts of Contract Law is foundation to a successful legal professional.

The general principles that affect these contracts, and that allow their enforcement in case of breach, are given in sections 1 – 75 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872 (commonly known as 'ICA'). Contract remedies are also provided in the Specific Relief Act 1963 (commonly known as 'SRA'). These two laws form the main course for this paper. In these topics, we will decipher all the vivid aspects of the Contract Act.

In this context, the course seeks to cover:

- the concepts of contract law and its relevance through decided cases;
- essential aspects of contract with reference to General principles;
- Application of contract law in practical use cases.

- appreciate and criticize the Indian statutory position relating to important elements of Contract Law
- Understand objects to a contract as an essential element and to understand the various case laws relating to it where the judiciary quashed enforceability of a contract.
- Learn other kinds of agreements which are expressly declared as void under Indian Contract Act, 1872.
- Understand the principles underlying the grant of specific reliefs and the different remedies provided under the Specific Relief Act.

HLC0306: LAW OF CRIMES -I

INDIAN PENAL CODE

Objective of the Course:

The Indian Penal Code is a Substantive law containing 511 sections. It was Lord Macaulay who moved the House of Commons in 1833 to codify the whole of Criminal Law in India. The Criminal Procedure Code was passed in 1860 (Amended in 1973). These two together constitute 'Criminal Law' of India. This codification of both the substantive and adjectival (Procedural) Criminal law brought uniformity and definiteness to the Criminal jurisprudence in India. Definition of offences, containing many ingredients must be remembered with abundant caution. Even if one ingredient is slipped, it will not amount to an offence. Further, the illustrations play a dominant role and should be studied again and again to comprehend the essentials of the offences. 'Mens rea' which is the subject of great discussion in England, is much simplified by the I.P.C. The subject is heavy but is worth its weight in gold.

After undergoing the study the student will be able to understand the following:

- Analyze criminal acts, their elements, parties to offenses, and application to the criminal justice system
- Express an increased awareness of the legal principles of criminal law and its application
- Students will demonstrate an understanding of the origins of criminal behaviour, society's response to crime, and the consequences of crime to our society, utilizing multiple perspectives
- Students will articulate ethical implications of decision making in a professional capacity.

HBC0411: SOCIOLOGY AND SOCIAL RESEARCH METHODS

Objective of the Course

Introduction to Social Research Methods, a course designed to teach and train law students on a variety of research approaches available in sociology in order to best address a research question in the Criminal Justice area. The purpose of this paper is to familiarize the law students with the logic of social science inquiry, to develop research question, strategies of research design, and a variety of research methods.

This paper will enable the students to understand the following:

- 1. Enable to train the students to conduct original research using quantitative, qualitative and historical research methods.*
- 2. Identify to give a basic frame work about the identification of research problem.*
- 3. Equipped to conceptualize, framing of hypothesis strategies of research plan and the tools of data collection.*
- 4. Able to understand the students to learn the report writing procedures.*
- 5. Designed in such a way will encourage the students to develop and use higher order thinking skills, including analytical, synthetic and applied thinking.*

COURSE OUTLINE

Module I: Introduction

- a) Establishment of Sociology as a Science-Contributions of August Comte, Herbert Spencer, Karl Marx, Emile Durkheim and Max Weber.
- b) Three Major Theoretical perspectives of Sociology: Functionalist Perspective, Conflict Perspective and the Interactionist Perspective.

Module II: Methods of Sociology

- a) Comparative method-Historical method-Statistical method-Case study-Survey method-Scientific method
- b) Limitations of Scientific method in Sociology- Sociology as a Science.

Module III: Social Research

- a) Meaning and definition of research and social research - Types of Research: Pure- Applied- Significance of social research- objectivity-subjectivity-deduction and induction method

Module IV: Research Problem and Hypothesis

- a) Identification or selection of research problem - formulation of research problem - precautions to be taken while selecting a research problem- Steps in the research process
- b) Hypothesis: Definition and characteristics-types of hypothesis-sources of hypothesis-problems in formulation of hypothesis.

Module V: Research Design and Sampling Technique

- a) Research Design:Definition- Types of research design-components of good research design.
- b) Sample: Definition- characteristics of good sample - advantages of sampling- types of sample – probability and non probability sampling.

Module VI: Sources of Data, and Tools of Data Collection

- a) Sources of data: primary- secondary- tertiary -Tools of data collection: interview-questionnaire-schedule-observation.
- b) Interview: Meaning-advantages-steps involved in interview-qualities of an interviewer-advantage and limitation of interview
- c) Questionnaire: Types of questionnaire-form of a questionnaire-pretesting – factors affecting the responses - reliability and validity - advantage and limitation of questionnaire
- d) Schedule: Essentials of good schedule-procedure for framing a schedule-general form and layout-content-types of question-language-sequence of questions-pilot study - advantages and limitations of schedule – difference between schedule and questionnaire.
- e) Observations: Kinds: participant-non participant-controlled and non-controlled observations- importance – limitations.

Module VII: Report Writing

- a) Meaning- types of report- requisite of good report- components of research report.

Learning Outcomes

After completion of the course the students will be able to -

- Identify steps in the research process and identify the basic elements of a good research design.
- Understand Sampling and apply various sampling techniques.
- Discuss characteristics of quantitative and qualitative measurement, and understand how to operationalize concepts using each approach.
- Apply various data collection techniques, for both quantitative and qualitative research.

HBC0412: SOFTWARE ENGINEERING, TESTING AND ITS LEGAL ASPECTS

Objectives of the Course:

1. Introduce the Knowledge of basic Software engineering methods and practices.
2. Determine the cost estimation and requirements of software.
3. Design the Real Time and Distributed System by using different test plans.
4. Get Knowledge in Software Testing.
5. Design and develop a software testing project.
6. Understand legal aspects and legal issues of software engineering

COURSE OUTLINE

Module I: Introduction to Software Engineering

- a) Definition - Size Factors, Quality and Productivity Factors
- b) Managerial Issue
- c) Planning a Software Project - Defining the Problem - Developing a Solution Strategy
- d) Planning the Development Process
- e) Planning an Organization Structure
- f) Other Planning Activities.

Module II: Software Cost Estimation

- a) Software Cost Factors
- b) Software Cost Estimation Techniques - Staffing Level Estimation - Estimating Software Maintenance Costs
- c) The Software Requirements Specification - Formal Specification Techniques
- d) Languages and Processors for Requirements Specification.

Module III: Software Design

- a) Fundamental Design Concepts
- b) Modules and Modularizing Criteria
- c) Design Notations - Design Techniques
- d) Detailed Design Consideration
- e) Real Time and Distributed System Design

- f) Test Plan -Mile Stones
- g) Walk Through and Inspection.

Module IV: Introduction to Testing

- a) Testing as an Engineering Activity
- b) Testing as a Process
- c) Testing Maturity Model
- d) Testing axioms – Basic definitions
- e) Software Testing Principles
- f) The Tester’s Role in a Software Development Organization.

ModuleV: Test Case Design Strategies

- a) Using the Black Box Approach to Test Case Design
- b) Random Testing - Equivalence Class Partitioning - Boundary Value Analysis
- c) Cause-effect graphing
- d) Using the White Box Approach to Test Case Design
- e) Coverage and Control Flow Graphs, Covering Code Logic
- f) Paths: Their Role in White Box–Based Test Design.

ModuleVI: Legal Aspects of Software Engineering

- a) Jurisdiction (international, federal, state laws)
- b) Intellectual property (copyright, patent, trademark, trade secrets)
- c) Contracts and licenses
- d) Privacy
- e) Free speech and its limitations (government secrets, obscenity)
- f) Complex areas (ISPs, e-commerce)
- g) Business law (personnel, your next job, etc.)

ModuleVII: Legal Issues Surrounding Software Engineering Professional Practice

- a) Standards
- b) Trademarks
- c) Patents

Objectives of the Course

- 1. Understand Object Oriented Programming (OOP) concepts and basic characteristics of Java.*
- 2. Know the principles of packages, inheritance and interfaces.*
- 3. Develop a java application with threads and to define exceptions.*
- 4. Design simple web pages using mark-up languages like HTML.*
- 5. Design interactive web pages using Scripting languages.*
- 6. Address the legal requirements and issues involved with the creation of a web site.*

COURSE OUTLINE

Module I: Introduction to OOP

- a) Objects - Classes
- b) Abstraction and Encapsulation
- c) Inheritance
- d) Abstract Classes
- e) Polymorphism.

Module II: Fundamentals of JAVA

- a) Objects and Classes in Java
- b) Defining Classes, Methods
- c) Method Overloading, Method Overriding
- d) Access Specifiers, Static Members
- e) Constructors, Methods, Finalize Method
- f) Introduction to Java, byte code, Objects, Classes
- g) Arrays, Strings, Packages, Java-Doc Comments.

Module III: Inheritance and Exception Handling

- a) Inheritance – Types of Inheritance

- b) Class Hierarchy
- c) Interfaces- defining an interface, implementing interface
- d) Polymorphism, Dynamic Binding, Final Keyword
- e) Abstract Classes and methods
- f) Exception Handling, try-catch-finally
- g) Exception Hierarchy, Throwing and Catching Exceptions.

Module IV: Multi-Threading

- e) Multi-Threaded Programming
- f) Thread Life Cycle and Methods
- g) Interrupting Threads
- h) Thread States -Thread Properties.

Module V: Website Essentials, HTML and Javascript

- k) HTML History, Versions
- l) Some Fundamental HTML Elements, Relative URL, Lists, Tables, Frames, Forms, Cascading Style Sheets.
- m) Introduction to Java Script, History and Versions
- n) JavaScript, Variables, Data Types, Statements, Operators, Literal Values
- o) Functions, Objects, Arrays, Built-in Objects.

Module VI: Website Legal Requirements

- a) Privacy policies
- b) Copyright notices
- c) Terms and conditions of use
- d) Disclaimers
- e) Accessibility information
- f) Abuse or complaints contact information
- g) Trademarks
- h) Patents
- i) Corporate policies.

Module VI: Website Legal Issues

- a) Copyright concerns

- b) Domain name concerns
- c) Trademark concerns
- d) Defamation
- e) Linking and framing.

HLC0509: JURISPRUDENCE

Objectives of the Course:

Laws are rules, claims are supported by arguments, and decisions are conclusions. The rules, arguments and conclusions are bound to conform to the requirement of logic. They must be systematically coordinated and carried to their consequences. Thus the whole body of legal doctrines can be considered is often considered as a more or less closely woven tissue of prepositions and deductions. The ideas which constitute this tissue are not presented to society ready-made; they are gradually unfolded by processes of collective thought; sometimes particular points get generalized and subjected to principles; at other times inferences are drawn from general prepositions. These processes constitute the dialects of law. Those dialects become ever standing principles and thus the consolidation of all wisdom of law becomes Jurisprudence.

HBC0614: INFORMATION SECURITY AND DIGITAL FORENSICS

Objectives of the Course

The use of computers, mobile phones and other digital devices across the globe has increased dramatically. These devices are more susceptible to information security attacks and thus they also possess huge evidences which shall be used during crime scene investigation. This makes the course on digital forensics an inevitable one for the security professionals which provides better understanding on basic information about cyber security and different forms of evidences in many digital devices, collection and interpretation of the same. After undergoing the study of this paper, the student should be able to understand the following:

- 1) Understand the different types of internet crimes and law related to the corresponding crime*
- 2) Identify the investigation tools used for digital evidence collection and preservation*
- 3) Understand the tools and techniques used for data recovery from deleted files and duplicate and live system.*
- 4) Understand the types of wireless networks and the security problems associated with the networks*
- 5) Identify the methods used for securing the networks access and the information in the network.*

COURSE OUTLINE

Module I : Internet Crimes

- a) Cyber Crimes – Classification of Conventional and Cyber Crime
- b) Hacking-Cracking-Viruses-Virus Attacks
- c) Hardware and Software Piracy-Intellectual Property in Cyber Space
- d) Social Engineering-Mail Bombs-Bug Exploits -Application Attacks
- e) Financial Frauds - Money laundering - Commercial Espionage and Commercial Extortion Online.

Module II : IT Law

- a) Introduction to IT Law
- b) Offences and Penalties under Information Technology Act and its Adjudicating Bodies
- c) Offences Related with Electronic Signature under Information Technology Act
- d) Role of Certifying Authorities – Cyber Appellate Tribunal.

Module III: Cyber Crime Investigation

- a) Introduction to Cyber Crime Investigation-Investigation Tools
- b) E-Discovery-Digital Evidence Collection-Evidence Preservation
- c) E-Mail Investigation-E-Mail Tracking-E-Mail Recovery
- d) PasswordCracking

Module IV:Computer Forensics Analysis

- a) Discovery of Electronic Evidence - Identification of Data
- b) Introduction to Deleted File Recovery - Recover Swap Files, Temporary Files and Cache Files
- c) Formatted Partition Recovery
- d) Data Recovery Tools- Data Preservation - Complete Time Line Analysis of Computer Files- Forensic Tool Kit (FTK)
- e) Working on Duplicate System-Working on Live System- Presentation of Evidence.

Module V:Wireless Technologies

- a) Wireless Networks - Personal Area Networks, Wireless Local Area Networks, Metropolitan Area Networks, Wireless Wide Area Networks
- b) War Chalking, War Driving and War Flying
- c) Common Wi-Fi Security Recommendations
- d) Steganography
- e) VPN

ModuleVI: Crime and Mobile Phones

- a) Crime and Mobile Phones-Evidences - Forensic Procedures
- b) Files Present in SIM Card-Device Data-Evidences in Memory Card
- c) Android Forensics - Procedures for Handling an Android Device
- d) Imaging Android USB Mass Storage Devices-Logical and Physical Techniques.

Module VII :Information Security

- a) Network Security Management - Firewalls, Intrusion Detection System (IDS)
- b) Information Security Management- Access Control Models- Role-Based and Lattice Models ,Mandatory and Discretionary Access Controls
- c) Technical Controls for Authentication and Confidentiality -Password Management
- d) Key Management for Users

HLC0615: LAW OF EVIDENCE

Objectives of the Course:

The Law of Evidence is one of the most important parts of the procedural law. The Law of Evidence plays a very important role in the effective functioning of the judicial system. The Law of Evidence is an indispensable part of both substantive and procedural laws. It imparts credibility to the adjudicatory process by indicating the degree of veracity to be attributed to 'facts' before the forum. This paper enables the student to appreciate the concepts and principles underlying the law of evidence and identify the recognized forms of evidence and its sources. The subject seeks to impart to the student the skills of examination and appreciation of oral and documentary evidence in order to find out the truth. The art of examination and cross-examination, and the shifting nature of burden of proof are crucial topics. The concepts brought in by amendments to the Law of Evidence are significant parts of study in this course.

After undergoing the study the student will be able to understand the following:

- To design, implement and review a plan for establishing each legal element of a given case to the required standard of proof with admissible evidence
- To plan and execute a witness examination that comports with evidentiary standards and that persuasively establishes a fact in issue in the case; anticipate and respond to evidentiary objections that may be raised during your examination
- To identify, articulate and assert appropriate evidentiary objections while listening to a witness examination, and respond appropriately to questions from the judge
- To draft and execute a witness examination for the introduction of a document or item of proof

HLA0601: INTERPRETATION OF STATUTES

Objectives of the Course

Interpretation as a branch of legal science emerges out of the necessity triggered by the element of fallibility of human communications. It is part of laws of nature. The increase in the creation of human legislations further validates the role of interpretation as a consistent source of legislation. The primary aim of all interpretation is to provide clarity to the existing legislations. Judiciary as the custodian of statutes interprets the legislation. Thus, the students of law on a need based approach will be trained to learn the implications of the schools of textualism and purposivism in the context of statutory construction as a tool of social change.

HLC0717: LABOUR LAW-I

INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS AND WAGE LAWS

Objectives of the course

Labour rights are being integral to the social and economic development since the industrial revolution. Well balanced industrial development leads to increased productivity which in turn is a factor of national progress. Gone are the days when despotic industry-owners treated our precious labour as a mere factor of production, no more than a cost to minimise in the profit and loss account. As we grow to honour the crucial contribution of labour in society, studying, analysing and understanding system of labour laws, and exploring, with a keen and uncompromising eye, its flaws, failures, gaps and loopholes, is the key to combating rampant inequality and ensuring that labour has the right to live with dignity. The labour laws introduced for this course defines socio-legal control of labour relations and the history, the present norms, the emerging areas and possible future techniques of labour jurisprudence with reference to the tripartite responsibility of State, Workers and Employers.

This course has been designed to:

- I. Educate the student on the historical evolution of modern labour jurisprudence;
- II. Explain the importance of the International Labour Organisation and its role in the development of labour law;
- III. Elucidate the importance of, and laws governing, trade unions;

HLC0718: MEDIATION AND CONCILIATION

Objective of the Course:

Judicial delay and arrears are the greatest form of causality in adversarial process. Adjudication through Court of Law are high in terms of time, expense and damage to relationships. With the introduction of Section 89, CPC and amendment in the Arbitration and Conciliation Act 1996 in 2015 and setting up of in-house mediation centers focus on noncoercive and consensual processes of Mediation and Conciliation is the fastest growing dispute resolution remedy worldwide. Mediation and Conciliation shall provide for a Win-Win situation for the parties to the dispute, as the resolution takes place with the characteristic of amicability, peacefulness and mutual settlement between parties thus, finality, without intervention of the Court. There is a need of blending judicial and non-judicial dispute resolution mechanism and bring mediation a primary method of resolution of dispute to the center of the Indian Judicial System. The subject is old but needs reassurance and learned in theory and practice, to be looked upon more as primary option than as Alternate dispute resolution (ADR) mechanism. This course will be learned under two basics. First, the theoretical understanding of the concepts and, the ethical and legal provisions relating to, mediation and conciliation. Secondly, the course is geared to train the students in the practical skills required to effectively participate and practice, mediation and conciliation processes.

After undergoing the study, the student will be able to understand the following:

- Law on the subject and the precedents laid down by court annexed mediation in India and abroad are exhaustively dealt with.
- Nature of dispute, conflicts and make choice of appropriate settlement technique to and resolve them.
- Identification of real needs and interests resolves the disputes without undergoing arduous trial procedures.

(d): INDUSTRIAL AND COMMERCIAL LAW

HS20704: INTERNATIONAL LABOUR ORGANISATION AND LABOUR JURISPRUDENCE

Objectives of the course:

Industrial legislation is the child of industrial jurisprudence, which in itself, is a product of the industrial revolution in the 18th, 19th and 20th Centuries, it was a form of protest against the inhuman labour conditions that the industrial revolution ushered in. In India, pre-independence era industrial jurisprudence was rudimentary. Protection of labour has always been the primary goal of industrial laws (both those enacted by the legislature and those developed through judicial interpretation). However, well before Indian labour jurisprudence became robust, the International Labour Organisation, a multinational labour body, led the way.

This course has been designed to:

1. Introduce students to the ILO, its formation, charter documents, composition, membership and functioning;
2. Examine the international labour code and the role of India vis-à-vis the international labour code;
3. Study in detail the historical development of labour jurisprudence;
4. Elucidate the long and mutually beneficial relationship between ILO and India;
5. Instruct students various concepts of labour jurisprudence, including tripartism, and understand the role of the judiciary in this regard.

The syllabus has been prepared with these objectives and consists of 6 modules.

FOURTH YEAR

VIII-SEMESTER

HLC0819: LABOUR LAW II

SOCIAL SECURITY AND LABOUR WELFARE LAWS

Objectives of the Course:

In the previous semester, students learnt the historical background and importance of labour rights and the basics of key labour legislations governing trade unions, industrial relations, standing orders and industrial disputes. While protection of labour rights in a dispute and permitting their unionisation is one side of the coin, taking proactive measures to promote the welfare and social security of labour is the other. As the Supreme Court of India has held, time and again, the right to life guaranteed under Article 21 is not merely animal existence, but the right to live with dignity. Therefore, taking steps to ensure that the labour force of our nation lives a life of security and dignity is of unspeakable importance and is part of the constitutional obligation of the State. The aim of social security legislation is to ensure freedom from want for our workers. This paper has been designed to help students understand the social security legislations in India in light of the above context.

This course has been designed to:

- I. Instruct the student on the concept of social security, its evolution, components, and objectives;
- II. Examine the role played by ILO in developing social security jurisprudence;
- III. Provide students with a critical and practical understanding of the rights of the employee in case of employment-related death, disablement, disease or accidents;

(d): INDUSTRIAL AND COMMERCIAL LAW

HS40804: SERVICE LAW

Objectives of the Course

“Government service is not a contract. It is a status”. Laws related to Public service in India are governed by the Constitution. One of the basic features of Indian Constitution is the separation of powers, i.e., the presence of three distinct pillars of state – Legislature, Executive and Judiciary. The Constitution conceived and provided for Civil Services like the All India Services and Central Civil Services which form an integral part of the Executive’s machinery at the central and state level. Labour laws governing civil services are quite distinct from general labour laws. The service conditions of the government servants are regulated by the Constitution of India.

This course has been designed to:

1. Trace the historical evolution of laws to govern civil services, both in ancient kingdoms and in the modern world;
2. Analyse the concept of public service laws as they are enshrined in the Indian constitution;

HS60904: SOCIAL SECURITY AND UNORGANISED LABOUR

Objectives of the Course

The bulk of India's labor force today is the unorganised sector. Suffering from poverty, without access to education, underpaid, unaware of their rights, and unable to enforce them, the odds are stacked against our unorganized sector. To address this problem, the legislature and the judiciary have, through laws and through judicial activism, repeatedly come to the rescue of these workers. This course is designed to introduce students to the challenges faced by this sector. The main objective is to instruct sector wise relevance which ensures the governance effectively. Other sectors can have identical/similar regulatory system and also be understood in the context of the treatment of the subject matter in this paper. The course work is within the viable framework.

This course has been designed to:

- I. Provide a broad-based understanding of the concept of the informal sector/unorganised labour – their nature, categories, industries, and the challenges and injustices they face;
- II. Instruct the student on the role of the ILO;
- III. Delve into the concept of social security for unorganised labour;
- IV. Focus on critical, India-specific sectors of unorganised workers and examine their individual challenges; and
- V. Survey the various legislations that target the upliftment of, and provision of benefits to, such workers.

I-SEMESTER

HBM0101: LEGAL LANGUAGE AND LITERATURE

English I

Objectives of the Course

The objective of the course is to train the student to obtain the basic knowledge of alphabets, words, parts of speech, phrases, clauses and sentences, apart from the need to upgrade English language skills for effective communication. This course focuses on strengthening the students' syntactical competence so as to bring quality and correct grammatical constructions in their writing and it is also meant to train them on how to study for various purposes. The prose lessons prescribed expose the students to different streams of higher thought in the realm of Politics, Law, Society and Literature. This course enables wholesome understanding of English language which plays a vital part in the acquisition of great advocacy skills.
