Main theme of the Seminar

With the adoption of the U.N Universal Declaration of Human rights in 1948, and related covenants in the succeeding decades, member states made a commitment to fundamental human rights for every man, woman and child on the planet. But the drive to translate that ideal into reality for the world has been a much more difficult task requiring action on a large number of fronts involving committed governments, inter-national and regional agencies, and non-governmental organizations. One of the most important components of the effort is human rights education (HRE). HRE is an emergent field of education theory and practice gaining increased attention and significance across the globe. HRE includes all learning that develops the knowledge, skills and values of human rights. It involves the learner's valuing and understanding of these principles which are typically problematized for that particular society. These human rights problems and issues at the community level are also relevant in HRE. The International Human Rights Movement has broadened its focus since late 1970s by seeking to integrate human rights concepts, norms and values within the mainstream of educational system of world states. This effort has gained momentum since 1990s has spawned a growing body of educational theory, practice and research that often intersects in other fields of educational study.

HRE is for training, dissemination and information efforts aimed at the building of a universal culture of human rights through the imparting of knowledge and skills and the moulding of attitudes. It is a lifelong learning process. Human rights advocacy is an integral part of HRE. HR Advocacy is providing a voice to the voiceless. HRE has been promoting about the rights ever since with the Greek and Roman civilization till date through Writers, Jurists, Lawyers, Judges, NGOs and Human Rights Activists etc. This is only a tip of the iceberg. A lot has to be done in this direction. Therefore all these issues are to be discussed and addressed by Academicians, Advocates Management, Social Scientists, Officials of various Departments, Research Scholars, Students, Non-Governmental Organisations and other professionals. Having committed to the human rights law and related subjects, The P.G. Departments of the Tamil Nadu Dr. Ambedkar Law University, Chennai proposes to organize a Two - Day National Seminar on "Human Rights Education: Gender Problems and Perspectives" . Papers are invited from the following broader areas:

Sub-themes:

- Women Movements in the Contemporary World
- HRE in the Promotion of Gender Justice with special reference to women victims, women prisoners, women labourers in organised and unorganised sectors
- Human Right Advocacy Skills relating to Gender Justice
- Science and Technology - Gender Issues and Challenges
- HRE - Role of National and International Institutions towards Gender Justice
- The Role of Supreme Court - Gender Equality and Gender Justice
- Legal reforms and Gender Justice
- HRE - Role of NGOs
